A First Time Vacation at Desire Resort & Spa - a Lifestyles experience, on the Riviera Maya, Mexico

My wife and I loved Desire, and we're ready to go back! It is the first time we have dabbled in the Lifestyle. We feel we've found one of the best (and most romantic) holidays. Where do I begin?

We had spectacular weather after a slightly overcast first day. The resort is quite small (no more than 110 rooms), but we felt that this was actually a major plus, making it far more intimate and easier for the staff to cater to individual needs and details. The food, for example, was always very good. We were quite happy to experience some authentic Mexican cuisine, along with many traditional staples. There is always something good to eat (no pun intended!) at Desire. There are also some very good custom drinks to be had. One of the staff brought me a "shark attack," while we were sunning on the beach and it was wonderful!

Speaking of the beach, we thought it was quite beautiful. There were enough chairs and shady spots. We also loved falling asleep in the numerous hammocks at night. The rooms are not as simple as some think. We stayed in an Oceanview room, and were pleased. Trust me, you don't go to Desire to stay in your room! Now the juicy stuff: this is what makes Desire. . . desire! My wife and I enjoyed the freedom of an adults only resort where romance is key. We never felt uncomfortable or pressured around other couples. There is a clothing optional main swimming pool and beach but NO ONE takes that option. If you are uncomfortable seeing the naked human body, you might want to reconsider. If seeing a naked couple snuggling in the pool is your thing, then Desire is for you!

There is also a Disco, with a back room where anything goes. At the disco, skimp goes well and as the night progresses it gets more and more raunchy!

We are not really the night club sort, so we spent our evenings at the rooftop Jacuzzi lounge. There is a great 36 seat Jacuzzi with a swim up bar. There are also seven or eight canopy beds nearby. This is a great place for snuggling and joining with some of the more wild stuff! Chris found she loved seeing others at it and playing at times. Before Desire I had been her only one...not now! We were seduced by the atmosphere and enjoyed being very naughty with two other couples on separate nights. She enjoyed both guys and, surprisingly, I really enjoyed seeing her being indulged! She really extended our education. She says that it is true that everyone feels different and she also discovered that big really is very good (and very orgasmic!).

The holiday has really added zip to our bedroom life and we intend trying out a sophisticated club back home.

We strongly recommend Desire for any couple who is not jealous, is securely in love, adore each other and like the idea of being naughty and seeing your partner at it too.

Susan, a college student asked a few questions of me for her Human Sexuality Psychology Class research paper on swinging. These are her questions and my answers:

Dr. Robert:

Thank you for your response and info. on swinging. I have a few more questions:

1. Are there 3 million swingers in North America, or more?

The actual number is not known, the figure you quote is only a guess. I am not aware of any legitimate survey. Couples who swing are not anxious to make their recreation known, other than to other like-interested couples. The number is certainly large though, and growing. Resorts such as Desire Resort & Spa - a Lifestyles experience, and others such as Hedonism II, Hedonism III, Grand Lido Braco, and those resorts that cater to the swing community by closing to others for a week or two each year for a couples takeover, would not have come into being otherwise. One need only do an Internet search on swinging, or to lifestyles-tours.com, lifestyles-conventions.com, www.lifestylesjapan.com, www.lifestylesmexico.com, or www.desire-resorts.com for some notion of the impact of swinging culturally and on business, or to www.nasca.com and look at the number of swing clubs to have an idea of the number of people interested in swinging.

2. Do you believe women are pushing the swinging movement today?

No, rather, it is couples who “push” for swinging. One must look at the relationship of the couples who swing to understand the appeal of swinging. My observation is that these couples have attributes of their relationship that is not in the whole common among so-called “traditional” marriages. They tend to have a strong relationship with mutual trust and a general lack of sex role playing. The partners are just that, partners; and the woman feel free to assert their sexuality without fear of sensure. There is a general lack of “ownership” of one’s mate, and rarely does jealousy complicate their lifestyle.

3. What is the psychological profile of swingers?

They tend to be upbeat about life and are generally successful in business. A high level of education has been observed. Though there are church members in the swing community, they do not accept all that is taught in religion, and do not allow religion to govern their adult recreational desires.

4. What is it about swinging that makes it such a taboo for some people and so inviting for others—or those who chose to swing? Is it the fear of the unknown? Not being in touch with your sexuality?

Religious upbringing, cultural mores, fear of non-acceptance, family ties, fear of exposure - all are factors.

5. Can I quote you—is there anything you would want to write—my thesis is that swinging should be accepted as an alternative lifestyle and compliment to marriage in attempt to prevent the 50% divorce rate. (along those lines)

Yes, you may quote me. It makes no difference whether swinging is accepted or not as a lifestyle - it simply is! It is not an alternative for most couples, at least not in this day and age. Those couples involved in the lifestyle are, in my observation, the “cream of the crop” as regards marriage and boyfriend/girlfriend relationships. Divorce comes about due to many factors. Sex may not even play a part. I once did a survey among colleges looking for courses on adult relationships. I found none. There were many courses on Marriage and the Family, but inclusion of “family” is a bias. There were no courses solely on the relationship of a man and a woman as long-term partners, such as in marriage.

FREE ADVICE

- for whatever it may be worth. But, as we are a "relationship" club we offer these:

"Lovers who laugh together live together longer than couples who lack the capacity of seeing the light side of life, especially in their own relationship."

"Sex forms a basis for fantastic togetherness. The lack of sexual gratification accelerates divorce in an otherwise satisfactory marriage." (Swinging anyone?)

"The capability of being with another person without feeling obligated to say or do anything is rare, but if it happens enough of the time, chances of a great relationship are high."

"I am afraid to tell you who I am because you may not like who I am and that's all I have." (Hmmm.)

"Keeping things to yourself may be great in a poker game, but in a love relationship it frequently builds up walls."

"Jealousy and possessiveness stem from deep-seated insecurity, and are stumbling blocks to a successful relationship."

But, what about the Saturday Parties?

The Playcouples Club, also known as Club WideWorld, is a private club restricted to membership of male-female couples only. The club reserves the right to refuse membership and attendance to anyone at our discretion.

Our Saturday parties are social events designed to bring like-minded couples together for an evening of uninhibited adult social pleasure.

We often have party themes and always have host couples in attendance to help our members to enjoy their chosen lifestyle. We strive to make each and every party an experience members will want to repeat again and again.

Parties begin with making a reservation, a short visit to the club offices for check in, then a short drive or walk to the party. The office is open party nights to about 9:15 P.M.. Should you not be able to arrive before the office closes you should call ahead with your credit card authorization, then go directly to the party.

Our parties open for your arrival at 8:30 P.M.. The first hour is a social one, a time to savor the always delicious buffet set out by Chef Sharon. Parties close when all have left or at 2:00 a.m.
